

JOHN CULVERHOUSE

June 7, 2010

To Whom it May Concern:

Letter of Reference for: Julian Jung Lee

I have known Master Lee (Julian Jung Lee) for 22 years. I first met him when my son signed up for his Taekwondo class. I subsequently signed up for lessons as well and continued until Master Lee transitioned full time to the film industry.

He was an excellent teacher and you will be able to find ample evidence to verify this. For me, the excellence of his teaching was exemplified in his emphasis on qualities such as self-improvement, understanding and respect for others, not on the more physical aspects of Taekwondo. To be sure, he was excellent in guiding and developing all of his students in all of the movements and physical forms of Taekwondo. (When he performed the movements [forms] himself, it was like watching poetry.) He, however, looked well beyond the physical components to how one should live one's life. He counseled that you should reach you goals and set new ones and that you should do your best. Note that his focus was on you doing your best, not on you doing better than someone else.

He is a man who has taken his own advice. He has carried his teaching philosophy over into his endeavors in the film industry. He continues to set goals and to work through adversity to attain them. He does not quit. Where others see setbacks, he sees learning opportunities and his quest for newer and better ways of doing things never ceases. In all of his undertakings I am confident that he is always trying to do his best. If you are fortunate enough to work with him you can be assured that he will be working hard and doing his best to finish the course

I am happy to call Julian Jung Lee a reliable friend that I can recommend without hesitation.

Respectfully,

John Culverhouse, Ph.D.
(University of Northern Colorado, 1988)
Email: john.culverhouse@comcast.net
Tel: 1 443 742 2137